Future of Defence UCITS ETF

Reasons to Invest

NATO defence budgets are set to grow

Despite record spending on defence in 2024, NATO's collective outlay remains only 2.7% of members' combined GDP. Substantial and sustained increases in defence spending will be needed for NATO to reach its 5% of GDP target.

Cyber defence is now mission critical

In the 21st century, cyber defence is a core pillar of national security. NATO's inclusion of cyber and network security in new spending targets reflects the growing threat of geopolitically motivated attacks on critical infrastructure.

NATO and allied exposure

Invests exclusively in companies domiciled in NATO or NATO-allied countries to ensure alignment with democratic values, geopolitical reliability, and strong regulatory oversight. This approach avoids exposure to defence firms in adversarial states.

Product Objectives

Future of Defence UCITS ETF (NATO) provides exposure to companies benefiting from rising NATO and NATO-allied defence and cyber defence spending. Global military expenditure is surging. In 2024, $2.7 trillion was spent on defence - the highest level ever recorded. Military spending per capita is now at its highest since 1990. NATO members have led this trend, increasing defence spending by 8.9% in 2024. This is expected to continue. In 2025, NATO members agreed to raise defence spending to the equivalent of 5% of GDP by 2035. This new target includes 3.5 percentage points allocated to traditional defence, and 1.5 dedicated to categories such as cyber security. The ETF tracks the EQM NATO+ Future of Defence Index and includes companies that derive over 50% of revenues from the manufacture and development of military aircraft and/or defence equipment, or have cybersecurity operations contracted with a NATO+ member country. Key Risks

Thematic ETFs are exposed to a limited number of sectors and thus the investment will be concentrated and may experience high volatility. Investors' capital is fully at risk and may not get back the amount originally invested. Exchange rates can have a positive or negative effect on returns. The value of equities and equity-related securities can be affected by daily stock and currency market movements. When you invest in ETFs, your capital is at risk.
