Quarter 4 2024

The fourth quarter of 2024 was marked by Donald Trump's Republican victory in the US and America's continued growth. This momentum is in contrast to the weakness in Europe and China. Central banks continued with their rate-reduction cycles while remaining vigilant about the risk of a resurgence of inflation. Geopolitical risks are still very present. Financial markets have generally continued their positive trends, and 2024 will ultimately be a good year for investors.

Macro Economy

US: political changeover and economic resilience

The US economy once again showed resilience in Q4, even if certain weaknesses persist. GDP growth bounced back by 2.8% in Q3, confirming its positive trend for 2024. Leading indicators, such as the ISM manufacturing index, remained in contraction territory at 48.4 in November, reflecting a lack of dynamism in industry, but improved in December (49.3). However, the services sector which had held up well until then, is showing signs of weakness. The ISM services index stood at 52.1 in November, down from the 56 recorded in October, disappointing for a consensus of 55.5. Consumption, a key driver of the economy, remains strong thanks to stable household incomes, but it faces persistent inflationary pressures. Consumer sentiment remains high, as shown by the Michigan Consumer Sentiment index, which rose 2.8 points in December compared to November. In the labour market, job creation significantly exceeded expectations, reaching 227,000 positions in November, demonstrating remarkable resilience and contributing to the positive consumer outlook. However, the unemployment rate rose slightly, reaching 4.2% (up 0.1% over the period), but remains under control.

The consumer price index stopped falling at the end of the year, rising to 2.6% in October and 2.7% in December, and underlying pressures remain high. But the Federal Reserve continued with its policy of gradually reducing rates, lowering its key rate by 0.5 percentage points to 4.5% over the quarter. The Fed no longer considers the labour market to be an inflationary factor and that the contribution of housing is a delayed effect that will fade. But it still remains cautious as its favourite inflation measure, the Core PCE index, remains at 2.8%. The Fed is looking to return to neutral while monitoring the risk of a return of inflation with the implementation of customs and immigration policies by the new Trump administration.

Europe: weak growth and political instability

Europe continues to navigate a gloomy economic environment, marked by weakened external demand, growing trade tensions, internal economic divergences and relative political instability. Growth momentum improved with the publication of Eurozone GDP for Q3 confirmed as being up 0.9% year-on-year. The labour market continued to improve with the Eurozone unemployment rate at 6.3%. Leading indicators (HCOB) for the manufacturing sector in the Eurozone remained contracted and were below expectations when released at the end of the year. There was also disappointment regarding services, which are heading for a short-term slowdown. Germany remains in recession for the second consecutive year, with GDP contracting by 0.3% year-on-year in Q3. The industrial sector, the mainstay of the German economy, is facing sluggish demand, exacerbated by trade tensions with China and the US. The automotive sector has been particularly affected, and is witnessing increasing job cuts. Olaf Scholz's government has lost its majority, leading to new legislative elections on 23 February, 2025. In France, the "Olympics effect" has faded, giving way to political uncertainty. Forecasts for the public deficit continue to deteriorate, reaching 6.1% of GDP in 2024. The Barnier government, which failed to pass the 2025 budget, has been criticised. French debt was ultimately downgraded by Moody's a few hours after the nomination of F. Bayrou as prime minister.

While inflation ticked up from 2% in October to 2.3% in November (annual variation of the harmonised price index) the European Central Bank lowered its key rates by 50 basis points over the quarter, bringing the deposit rate to 3.00%. The Bank of England lowered its key rate by 25 basis points to 4.75%.

Emerging markets

In China, the government continued its support for the real estate sector, focussing its efforts on cleaning up bank balance sheets and local public finances. However, the weakness in the real estate sector continues to weigh on household confidence. China is also confronted with the risk of deflation (inflation at 0.3% in October then 0.2% in November, year-on-year) as export momentum runs out of steam and could deteriorate further with a rise in US customs tariffs with Donald Trump's return to power. This environment continues to put the brakes on growth, and it will probably be lower than the 5% target.

In India overall economic momentum remains positive (supported by major investments in infrastructure) despite disappointing Q3 2024 GDP of 5.4% compared to the expectation of 6.5%. Tensions in the labour market and a slowdown in some strategic sectors such as technology, are reducing the outlook for growth.

In Brazil, sustained growth continues, leading the International Monetary Fund to increase its forecast for 2024 from 2.1% to 3%. The central bank, facing a resurgence in inflation, has raised its interest rates 50 points to bring the Selic rate to 12%.

Financial Markets

Bond Markets: Divergent trends between the US and Europe

In the US, Treasury bond yields continued to rise, reaching 4.58% at the end of the period. This trend is explained by the resilience of the US economy, and anticipation of a widening in the budget deficit, linked to the announcements of tax cuts by the future president, Donald Trump, as well as the risk of a return to inflation in 2025. 2-year, short-term rates have continued along a similar path, climbing to 4.36% in December, and reflecting a persistent inflationary environment, which limited the Fed's cycle of rate cuts.

In Europe the disparity is significant, against a background of a faster-than-expected decline in inflation and weak growth, suggesting additional rate cuts by the ECB. German 10-year bond yields moved back to 2.1%, while French bonds (OATs) reached 2.9%, before going back up to 3.20% at the end of the period. The spread between French and German bonds widened exceeding 80 basis points after the vote of censure of the Barnier government. Conversely, the spread between Italian and Spanish sovereign bond rates and those of Germany has narrowed, leading to a shift in French debt. Eurozone short-term rates are volatile: in Germany they fluctuated throughout the quarter, stabilising at 2.09% in December, while French rates ended the quarter at 2.28%. These movements reflect adjustments in the face of economic divergences between the member states and the accommodative policy of the ECB.

Share Markets: contrasting performances across the world

In the US stock market indices reached new highs, driven by expectations of a tax policy and deregulation favourable to American companies, and the performance of technology stocks. The S&P 500 crossed the 6,000-point threshold before dropping back, posting a gain in USD of 3.03% over the quarter. Mega Caps soared more than 14%, strongly driving the market. The Nasdaq — particularly exposed to the Big Tech companies and to Artificial Intelligence — outperformed, rising 6.27% (in USD). The Republican victory in the elections led to significant international flows into US stocks. These performances illustrate the pursuit of “Trump Trade” and renewed confidence in the American economy, as well as investors being attracted to growth stocks.

In Europe, indices were punished by political uncertainty and disappointing economic data. The Eurostoxx 50 ended the quarter down 1.17% (in EUR). Sector divergences were marked and European giants (the “Granolas”) fell 7.6%. The CAC 40 closed down 2.55% over the quarter, due to disappointing performances from the luxury goods and automotive sectors, combined with a discount linked to political uncertainty. The German DAX, more exposed to technology and financials, stood out with a noteworthy positive performance of 3.8%.

In Asia, the Nikkei 225 fell 5.6% (in USD) in the fourth quarter, following Yen volatility and the unpredictability of the Bank of Japan's choices. The rebound in Chinese shares that began at the end of September, after the announcement of significant measures to stabilise the real estate sector, continued to the beginning of October, then faded. Investors are now waiting for concrete action. Yet this rebound illustrates a return of confidence in Beijing's ability to stabilise its economy after several quarters of slowdowns.

Quarter 1 2025

The US economy showed signs of weakness in Q1 2025, while the Fed kept rates unchanged in the face of a return of inflationary pressures. This benefited Europe, with the ECB continuing to lower its headline rates while at the same time governments coordinated their stimulus efforts. China also announced a plan to stimulate consumption. Financial markets have been unsettled by Donald Trump's assumption of office and his sometimes contradictory decision-making. After having broken records, US share indices consolidated and underperformed Europe and China. Long-term interest rates performed strongly in the Eurozone and have remained stable in the United States.

Macro economy

United States

After a near-euphoric phase following the election of Donald Trump, the US economy has maintained a positive pace, but is clearly showing signs of weakness, disrupted by a flood of sometimes contradictory decisions from the new administration. March marked a turning point with a downturn in household confidence, wage stabilisation and a sharp rise in inflation expectations.

Economic growth indicators such as the ISM and S&P PMI are contrasting, although we witnessed a slight improvement in the manufacturing sector's outlook at the end of the quarter. However, the trade war started by Washington is reducing visibility for business. The unemployment rate remained stable at 4.1%, but wage increases have slowed, due to a reduction in the Federal civil service workforce and the expulsion of millions of illegal workers, which is maintaining pressure on low-skilled employment.

Against this uncertain backdrop, the Fed is procrastinating, choosing to keep key rates unchanged, much to the dismay of president Trump. However, faced with volatility on the bond market, it has slowed down the speed of a reduction in its balance sheet. The March-end release of the PCE core inflation rate, the Fed's favourite benchmark, exceeded expectations at 2.8% on an annual basis, which should encourage it not to cut rates in April. Markets are anticipating two to three rate cuts in the second half of 2025.

Europe

The European economy is facing significant challenges, with weak growth and signs of a downturn in several countries in Q1. The HCOB PMI survey still indicates a contraction in the manufacturing sector but the outlook is clearly improving in Germany where industry has been stagnating since the pandemic.

European leaders have maintained their cohesion in the face of American protectionist measures and the risk of it withdrawing its military support for Ukraine. In an historic development, just a few days after the German legislative elections (23 February), the barriers to public spending were lifted, and the future Chancellor Mertz (CDU), supported by a coalition with the SPD and the Greens, launched a vast recovery plan. Out of the announced €500 billion investment in infrastructure, €100 billion will go to defence, which is a radical change. This unprecedented budgetary stroke should bolster Germany's potential growth, and with it, that of the Eurozone. As a result, economists who revised down their forecasts in January, raised them again in March.

Inflation in the Eurozone appeared to have resumed its downward trend and the harmonised price index (from February, released in March) fell back to 2.3% (2.4% in January). Inflation is still driven by services (3.7%) but the contribution of energy is now low. Core inflation is now at 2.4% and should reach 2% by the end of the year.

Noting inflation's downward trend, and despite the risks linked to the trade war with the US, the European Central Bank (ECB) lowered its rates by 50 basis points over the quarter, the deposit rate dropping from 3% to 2.5% against a backdrop of a slowdown in the Eurozone, while warning that it remains vigilant about how inflation will evolve.

The Bank of England (BoE) reduced its interest rates by 25 bp, bringing them back to 4.5%. The move follows downward revisions to growth forecasts, with the BoE lowering its projections for 2025 from 1.5% to 0.75%.

Asia

The Japanese economy continued to show encouraging signs with an uptick in consumption and dynamic exports (before US tariffs), and inflation stabilising despite a falling index. The Bank of Japan maintained its headline rates unchanged but normalisation is not complete.

The economic outlook continues to deteriorate in China. Recent PMI data, down from December, indicates a further weakening of the economy. In response, the National People's Congress outlined plans to support the economy through budgetary spending, monetary support and the allocation of additional resources to domestic demand. These decisions involved an upward revision in the growth outlook for 2025 and 2026. Nevertheless, the risk of a slowdown in Q2, with weak consumption and the negative impact of US tariffs, should encourage the PBoC to act.

In India, the reduction in public spending has slightly reduced growth prospects. Inflation was lower than expected in February, at 3.6%, a deceleration from 4.3% in January. This decline is mainly due to a sharp slowdown in food prices. The Reserve Bank of India may cut rates earlier than expected, starting from April.

Financial markets

Equities

The MSCI ACWI fell 2% over the quarter (in USD). The rotation initiated at the end of 2024 in favour of Europe (MSCI Europe up 10%) and China (MSCI China up 14.5%) continued at the start of this year, while major US stocks were consolidating (MSCI USA down 5%).

After having posted a new high of 6,144 points on 19 February, the S&P 500 ended the quarter down 4.6% and the Nasdaq 100 was down 8%. On the other hand, European shares posted positive performance; the Eurostoxx 50 was up 7.2% and there was clear outperformance in Germany, the DAX 30 was up 11.3%. There was equally positive performance from emerging markets (MSCI EM up 2%), driven by China.

The underperformance by US shares can be explained by several factors: (1) a collapse in the values of the "Magnificent Seven", which lost close to 16% over the quarter; (2) the divergence of the paths of the Fed and the ECB and (3) the stimulus plans in Germany and China, which boosted profit expectations in the short and medium term. Lastly, the prospect of a ceasefire in Ukraine could lower the risk premium on European assets and lead to markets repositioning.

Moreover, the avalanche of sometimes contradictory announcements from Donald Trump generated increased volatility, pushing the VIX up to 22% (+ 5 points). Investors have revised their forecasts in the face of new trade tariffs, which has led to a fall in the automotive sector, particularly in Japan and Korea (Nikkei down 11%). In response to the risk of the US withdrawing from Ukraine, massive investment in rearming Europe, notably the ReArm Europe plan for €800 billion, has shored up the defence sector.

Bonds

The first quarter was marked by high volatility in interest rates, with long-term rates in the Eurozone rising in March, while US yields generally fell. We are witnessing a convergence of long-term rates.

Yields on 2- and 10-year US Treasury bonds, which had risen sharply in late 2024, fell by 36 bp each, finishing at 3.8% and 4.2% respectively, as investors now anticipate a decline in growth.

In the Eurozone the downward trend of interest rates has reversed after the announcement of an increase in the German budget deficit and the expectation of a rise in bond issues. 10-year Bund rates rose by more than 37 bp, but the short end remained anchored at 2%, in anticipation of the ECB's key rate cuts. The steepening of the Eurozone curves has therefore increased. Spreads remain stable with an 11 bp narrowing of the spread between the French OAT and the German 10-year Bund.

Credit initially proved resilient in this period of sovereign rate volatility, but then spreads began to widen, particularly on US high yields, with equities falling and volatility rising.

Foreign exchange, gold and oil

The foreign exchange market has been volatile in relation to movements in interest rates. The prospect of divergence between the Fed and the ECB initially strengthened the dollar (EUR/USD 1.02) before the sharp rise in German long-term rates brought the euro back to 1.08 against the dollar.

The geopolitical situation and the fall in the dollar have favoured gold, which rose 19% and reached an historic high of $3,124 an ounce.

Oil prices fell by 5% amid expectations of increased production from OPEC and the United States, as well as a halt to fighting in the Middle East, only to rise again amid new sanctions against Russia.

Quarter 2 2025

The quarter has been marked by a trade war by the US. This darkened growth prospects and heightened fears of inflation taking hold again. The Fed took a wait-and-see approach while the ECB pursued lowering headline rates. China's response and the about-turns by Washington fuelled uncertainty on financial markets, marked by a significant decline in the dollar and in shares, and strong pressure on long-term interest rates. Military operations between Israel/United States and Iran caused significant volatility in oil prices. Despite this turmoil, markets have proved resilient and generally held up well.

Macro economy

United States

Donald Trump's announcement on 2 April of prohibitive tariffs for the majority of the US's trade partners has been a shock for businesses, consumers and investors. After the downturn in markets and the dollar, the suspension of this decision for 90 days from 9 April helped to reduce tensions, but the growth outlook for the US economy was revised downwards. The release of the growth figure, GDP, for the first quarter confirmed the slowdown by contracting 5%. The Federal Reserve is now predicting growth of 1.4% for 2025. The IMF forecasts 1.8% and the World Bank 1.4%, which signals significant uncertainty among economists. The new budget, the "Big Beautiful Bill", being negotiated with Congress, is expected to cut taxes by $4.5 trillion and increase the national debt by $3.3 trillion.

Household consumption, supported by a still-resilient jobs market, remains solid, but is showing signs of weakness. Net job creation is slowing but the unemployment rate remains stable at 4.2%. Advanced indicators (manufacturing ISM¹ stable at 48.5 and non-manufacturing ISM down at 49.5 nevertheless confirm a deterioration in the outlook. At the end of the quarter, cyclical data shows a slowdown in consumption and industrial production: US retail sales fell 0.9% in May compared to April; industrial production was almost stagnant in May and new construction is down

¹ The HCOB PMI® Germany Services Activity index is based on a single question: comparing the level of activity with that of the previous month. An index less than 50.0 indicates a contraction, and the further below 50.0 it is, the faster the rate of decline.

Inflation measures have given mixed signals. The core consumer price index for May came in below expectations at 2.4% (vs. 2.5% expected). However, PCE inflation, the Fed's preferred gauge, appears to be picking up again. Core PCE inflation came out up 2.7% on an annual basis, as against the 2.6% expected by consensus opinion. Against this background, the Fed decided to wait and see, and kept key rates unchanged, between 4.25% and 4.50%, despite a great deal of pressure from the White House.

Europe

Europe's accelerated growth appears thwarted by the American trade war, despite the unprecedented increase in public spending in Germany. Growth for the first quarter in the Eurozone was above expectations at 1.5% on an annual basis. Growth prospects for 2025 have now been revised upwards by the European Central Bank (ECB) to 0.9% for 2025. The strength of the labour market, with an unemployment rate at an historically low level of 6.3% should stimulate consumption and support growth. After the fall in April, surveys show good resilience in the Eurozone. The outlook for the manufacturing sector has stabilised, with the HCOB PMI² survey reaching 50.2 in June, compared to 49.4 in May, signalling a slight improvement in manufacturing orders. In Germany, the ZEW index rose sharply in June, climbing 22.3 points in relation to May, to reach 47.5, indicating an improvement in expectations, confirmed by the IFO business climate index. We see weakness in France, while the outlook is improving in Germany. This deterioration in French prospects was confirmed by the Bank of France's quarterly survey.

The new German government has adopted a 2025 budget project and ambitious budget plans for the medium term. The measures focus on tax breaks for companies and support for the energy price for households and businesses, which aims to boost confidence and improve the economy's growth potential. The 2025 budget deficit is expected to reach 3.2% of GDP.

The slowdown in inflation in the Eurozone was confirmed by May's data, with an increase of only 1.9%, the services sector being the main contributor. The ECB revised down its inflation forecast for 2026 to 1.6%, then 2% in 2027, and has cut its deposit rate by 50 bp over the quarter.

In the United Kingdom, the Bank of England (BoE), maintained the status quo, leaving its key rate unchanged at 4.25%. Nevertheless, the slowdown in property prices coupled with weak consumer confidence, may prompt the BoE to lower its rates in the third quarter.

Asia

Japan saw a contraction in GDP in the first quarter and movement during May remained weak. GDP fell by 0.2% quarter-on-quarter, penalised by weak exports. This figure still does not fully reflect the impact of US trade tariffs. Underlying inflation accelerated in April to 3.5% year-on-year (compared to 3.2% in March) However, weak growth heralds a very gradual recovery. The Bank of Japan (BoJ) kept its key rate at 0.5% due to the slowdown in the Japanese economy and inflation. No imminent rate hike has been announced, except perhaps in January 2026 if the cyclical recovery is confirmed. Moreover, in order to limit the volatility of long-term rates, the BoJ has decided to reduce its balance sheet more slowly. Finally, the Finance Minister announced a reduction in the issue of very long maturities to take pressure off the 30-year bond.

The trade war with the United States has affect the economic outlook in China. The Caixin manufacturing sector index released in early June was below expectations at 48.9, anticipating further deterioration. The services sector has expanded only slightly. However, the decline in property prices continues, prompting the authorities to further support the market. The official unemployment rate is stable at 5.1% and retail sales up 6.4% were reported. Yet deflation has been confirmed. Producer prices fell by 3.3% and consumer prices were also down by 0.1% for May. As a result, the central Chinese bank (PBoC) resumed its monetary easing against a backdrop of trade uncertainty, lowering its 1-year rate to 3% and the 5-year rate to 3.5%. Moreover, the trade surplus remained largely unchanged at 750 billion yuan in May and the country is facing two targets — maintaining urban unemployment at around 5-5.5% on the one hand and on the other creating 12 million jobs by the end of the year.

In India the economic outlook remains solid and the composite HSBC survey for June was above expectations at 61, versus the expected 59.4. The fall in inflation persists, reaching its lowest level for 6 years. It was at 2.8% year-on-year in May, compared to 3.2% in April, due to the slowdown in food prices. Underlying inflation is also down. This environment allowed the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) to lower its headline rate by 50 basis points. The next meeting will be held in early August and will see the announcement of a probable pause in monetary policy.

Financial markets

Equities

Equities markets experienced extreme volatility at the beginning of April following the announcement of tariffs, and then their postponement, but performances have been positive over the quarter. In May, US markets outperformed Europe and Asia, driven by good results for the "Magnificent Seven". This trend was confirmed in June when US indices posted historic highs. The S&P 500 gained 10.6% at the end of March and the Nasdaq 100 rose 17.6%. In contrast, in the Eurozone the Eurostoxx 50 only gained 1%, driven by the DAX 30 (up 7.9%) but dragged down by the CAC 40 (down 1.6%). On the currency side, the euro again appreciated, by 9% this quarter against the dollar, bringing its increase to 13% since the beginning of the year. Therefore, when denominated in euros, the United States' market performance has been mediocre. After exceeding 50% in April, the volatility index, the VIX, returned below 17% at the end of the period, reflecting the return of some optimism. Emerging markets rose 11.5% in dollars. In Asia the trend is positive overall, notably in Korea and Taiwan. The Chinese market remained volatile and ended the quarter down an average of 2% in dollars, due to the lack of fiscal stimulus.

Bonds

The second quarter saw a fall in short-term rates and strong volatility in the long US rates. The movement in short-term rates is linked to the expectation of rate cuts by the Fed and the ECB, a fall in inflation and an outlook of a slowdown in global growth. Bond volatility remains high, in particular for US Treasuries, fuelled by (geo)political and budgetary uncertainties. In the US the 10-year rate ended the quarter at around 4.23% in mid-June, after a rise to 4.6%. The 2-year rate ended at 3.72%. Investors are expecting monetary easing in the second half of the year and a slowdown in US nominal growth. In the Eurozone, the 10-year German Bund reached 2.61% and the 2-year fell 22 bp compared to the end of the year (and by 19 bp compared to the end of March) to reach 1.86%, while the ECB continues with its cycle of cuts, bringing back its deposit rates to 2%. Sovereign rate spreads in the Eurozone remain stable, except Italy's, which dropped 26 bp. Corporate bonds maintained their positive performance, in particular those with high yields.

Foreign exchange and commodities

The euro strengthened by 9% against the dollar and emerged as a potential global alternative to the latter, rising from 1.08 to 1.18 over the quarter. Sterling also continues to appreciate against the greenback and is up nearly 6.5% since the end of March. The yuan remains stable near 7.2 against the dollar and the yen has strengthened slightly against the dollar.

Gold confirmed its status as a safe haven, breaking records, with an ounce touching 3,450 dollars in April and May, and stabilising at $3,303 per ounce at the end of June. Gold has risen 25.9% since the start of the year.

The price of a barrel of oil has been very volatile over the period, due to the war between Israel/United States and Iran. But the price of oil has fallen significantly over the quarter due to the deterioration in economic prospects, but mainly due to an increase in OPEC production quotas, in particular Saudi Arabia. A barrel of Brent lost $10 (down 9.5%) over the quarter, ending at around $68, having brushed the symbolic $60 mark, on 5 May, its lowest level since February 2021, but was $80 at the beginning of June.

Quarter 3 2025

Q3 economic momentum has remained solid, despite the trade war and geopolitical risks. US growth has been revised upwards. Despite inflation falling far short of its target, the Fed cut rates, anticipating a slowdown in the labour market. In Europe, growth was more moderate whereas inflation is close to the ECB's target. Asia is still the most dynamic region, with China, India and Japan maintaining positive momentum. On the markets, the dollar stabilised after its sharp fall at the beginning of the year, while gold is breaking records. Equities and credit are performing well, with emerging markets outperforming significantly, and there is a divergence in interest rates, which are generally falling in the United States and rising in Europe.

Macro economy

United States

Despite the shock of the trade war and the sometimes brutal decisions of the Trump administration, the momentum of the US economy surprised on the positive with an uptick in GDP growth of 3.8% in Q2, exceeding the previous estimate of 3.3% after the 0.5% contraction in Q1. Growth continued to be driven by consumption (rising retail sales) and productive investment. Leading indicators continue to point toward an extension of the cycle, particularly in the services sector. The labour market remains dynamic, even if signs of weakness in job creation are becoming more significant. The unemployment rate rose from 4.1% in June to 4.3% in August.

Inflation measured using the consumer price index continued its rally. It reached 2.9% year-on-year in August, whereas it had fallen back to 2.3% in April. It was at the same level of 2.9% using the Federal Reserve's preferred measure — core PCE (Personal Consumption Expenditures). However, the impact of customs duties appears limited at this stage. The production prices index, after rising 0.9% in July, contracted by 0.1% in August.

The quarter was marked by the stand-off between Trump and the Federal Reserve, with the President of the United States judging monetary policy to be too restrictive. Following the surprise resignation of the Democrat Adriana Kugler, Trump nominated Stephen Miran to replace her. He is an economist close to the White House and in favour of rate cuts. He also removed governor Lisa Cook from office, on suspicion of tax fraud. At the Jackson Hole symposium, Jerome Powell, President of the Fed, indicated that the risk to employment was greater than a resumption of inflation. This turnaround materialised in September with a 25-basis point reduction to 4.25%. Although inflation is well above target, the Fed has nevertheless chosen to lower its rates, indicating that it is refocussing on its employment policy. Investors are now anticipating a new phase of rate cuts through to mid-2026.

Political tensions remain high and antagonisms are being exacerbated by violence. The Republicans' narrow majority puts them at the mercy of the budget vote being blocked for a new government shutdown.

Europe

Eurozone:

The return of growth to the eurozone was confirmed. Q2 GDP growth was revised upwards to 1.5% year-on-year, particularly driven by Spain where GDP grew by 0.8% in Q2. After several months of improvement in the manufacturing sector (particularly in Germany), the outlook stabilised at the end of the quarter, with the HCOB PMI manufacturing index falling back to 49.5 in September from 50.7 in August and 49.8 in July. On the other hand, the services sector posted a net gain, with the services PMI reaching 51.4 in September, compared to 50.5 in August and 51 in July. Unemployment remained steady over the quarter, at 6.2%, but there remained a strong disparity between economies with full employment, such as Germany, and those where there is still a high unemployment rate (France, Italy, Spain).

The European Commission reached a trade deal with the White House at the end of July, after difficult negotiations. While this deal restores visibility for European exporters, they will be subject to a maximum customs duty of 15%. Europe is in advanced negotiations with India, while the deal with MERCOSUR continues to create tensions.

Inflation stabilised around the European Central Bank's (ECB) target, with a positive contribution from food prices and a negative contribution from energy prices. The harmonised index of consumer prices (IPCH) stood at 2.3% in July, then 2.1% in August, year-on-year. Consensus estimates expect 2.2% in September. It should reach the 2% target at year-end 2025 and the start of 2026. However, there are stark differences between countries, with France posting inflation of less than 1% while in Spain the figure reached 2.9% year-on-year (August figures). Against this backdrop the ECB decided to maintain the status quo and its deposit rate at 2%, while leaving the door open for a rate cut by the end of the year.

United Kingdom

Q2 GDP growth was revised upwards, to an annual variation of 1.4%. Inflation remained high, at 3.8% in July and August year-on-year (CPI) driven by a positive contribution from restaurants and hotels prices, but offset by a fall in air fares. Despite this inflation figure being a long way from the Bank of England's target, it decided to cut its headline rate over the summer by 25 basis points and to keep it at this level in September, leaving room for a future cut in November.

Asia

The summer was marked by the SCO (Shanghai Cooperation Organisations) conference which brought more than 20 heads of states and governments representing 3.4 billion people, around Xi Jin Ping. Significant were the presence of Vladimir Putin, Kim Jung Un and even the Indian prime minister Narendra Modi, whose relations with the US are particularly strained, due to the trade war.

China: The Chinese GDP growth rate stood at 5.2% year-on-year in Q2, however the deflationary background persists. The consumer price index stood at 0% in August, as in July, but year-on-year it contracted by 0.4% (0% in July). The production index continued to decline, to -3.6% in July and -2.9% in August, year-on-year. Real estate prices continued to fall, with new homes prices dropping by 2.8% in July (annual variation) and 2.5% in August. Although retail sales increased by 3.7% in July and 3.4% in August, worth highlighting is the over-production by Chinese manufacturers. Finally, unemployment rose over the quarter, starting at 5% in June and reaching 5.3% in August. Under these conditions the People's Bank of China continued with its monetary policy of easing. But the authorities made no major announcements aimed at jump-starting the economy.

Japan: A revision of the annual growth figure to 2.2% for Q2 confirmed the vitality of the Japanese economy. The consumer price index remains high, but slowed over the quarter. After an annual variation of 3.3% in June it fell to 2.7% in August. Unemployment decreased over the quarter, standing at 2.3% in July after four months at 2.5%. Against this background, despite persistent high inflation, the Japanese Central Bank retained its headline rate of 0.50% in July and September, to avoid bond market jitters. But still two members of the BoJ voted for an increase to 0.75%. Such disagreement is unusual for the Bank of Japan and heralds a rate rise by the end of the year.

India: India's dynamic growth continued with GDP surging to 7.8% in Q2 year-on-year. After nine months of falls, inflation ticked up again, with the consumer price index reaching 2.07% in August compared to 1.61 in July. This increase was largely due to the rise in food prices, which represent half of the CPI basket, but also to base effects. The Reserve Bank of India (RBI) then decided to reduce its key interest rate by 50 basis points in June, while remaining cautious in the face of the risks linked to customs duties and persistent underlying inflation. Under these circumstances the RBI chose to keep its headline rate at 5.5% at its 1 October meeting.

Markets

Equities markets

Equities markets continued with their positive trajectory throughout Q3, bolstered by the United States, Japan and China. The signing of several trade agreements reassured investors whereas geopolitical tensions had little impact on risk premiums.

The MSCI ACWI USD index closed the month up 7.3% while emerging markets outperformed with the MSCI Emerging Markets index gaining 9.6%. The outlook for the AI sector and US monetary policy easing after Jerome Powell's speech at Jackson Hole, and the cut in rates in September, buoyed the market. The S&P500 gained ground by 7.8% and the Nasdaq 100 was up 8.8% over the quarter. Turning to mega-caps now, NVIDIA reported results slightly better than expectations, but posted more moderate data centre revenue growth amid a pause in sales of AI chips to China. The spectacular growth in Oracle's order book endorsed the sector's positive trend.

European stocks posted more moderate growth. The Eurostoxx 50 gained 4.3%, driven by the defence sector and banks. Despite political instability in France, the CAC 40 closed up 3%. In Germany the DAX 30 consolidated, declining slightly, by 0.1% over the quarter, but it has nevertheless remained strong since the start of the year, with a 19.9% gain.

In Asia, China and Japan were the outperformers over the quarter. The Nikkei 225 climbed 11%, driven by investors returning to this market that has been underweight for some time, whose outlook is improving. China saw an outstanding quarter, with the HSCEI gaining 10% and retaining its place as a top performer in 2025, with a 31.1% annual gain.

Bond markets

We witnessed a divergence in interest rate trends, with contraction in the United States and an increase in Europe. The 2-year US rate lost 11 basis points, closing the quarter at 3.61%, while the 10-year US Treasury yield posted a decline of 8 basis points to 4.15%. This decrease reflects monetary policy easing, with rates anticipating the cut in September even before the Fed's official announcement. The 30-year US Treasury yield was no exception, and posted a slight drop of 4 basis points to close at 4.73%, but remains at historically high levels — a return to 2007.

In Europe the trend was rather the opposite, as markets expected an increase in German issues to finance infrastructure projects. Germany posted a rise of 16 basis points on its 2-year bond (closing at 2.02%) and the 10-year Bund backed up the trend, rising 10 basis points to 2.71%. France, where the 2026 budget vote remains in the balance, saw its 2-year OAT rate rise 11 bp to 2.25% and its 10-year yield increase 28 bp to close at 3.53%. In this environment of easing European rates, the 10-year rate spreads vis-à-vis Germany have contracted; Spain has seen its rate tighten by 9 bp compared to those of Germany and Italy, 5 bp. France, facing political instability, saw its spread rise 15 bp reaching 82 bp.

Foreign exchange, gold and oil

The dollar stagnated against the euro over the quarter, with the EURUSD rate at 1.173 (down 0.4%) and rose against the Yen with the USDJPY rate at 148 (up 2.7%) following the trend since the start of the year and thanks, in part, to the Fed's rate cut. Against this backdrop gold continued its meteoric rise and closed the quarter up 16.8%, reaching its highest level at $3859 per ounce. Oil ended the quarter close to its June-end price, closing at $67 (down 0.67%).
