Key risks

The value of your investment may fall as well as rise and you may get back less than you originally invested.

Given the Sub-Fund will have exposure to a globally diversified portfolio of equity and debt securities through investments in Underlying Funds primarily, effective diversification of the Sub-Fund's exposure to these asset classes may not be always achieved as investment decisions in respect of the Underlying Funds are made independently of the Sub-Fund. Certain Underlying Funds traded on exchanges may be thinly traded and experience large spreads between the "ask" price quoted by a seller and the "bid" price offered by a buyer. Certain types of Underlying Funds may not have the same rights normally associated with ownership of other types of shares. In addition, exchange-traded funds may trade at a price below their net asset value (also known as a discount).

The value of equity securities may go down as well as up in response to the performance of individual companies and general market conditions, sometimes rapidly or unpredictably. If a company goes through bankruptcy or a similar financial restructuring, its shares in issue typically lose most or all of their value.

The value of debt securities may change significantly depending on economic and interest rate conditions as well as the credit worthiness of the issuer. Issuers of debt securities may fail to meet payment obligations or the credit rating of debt securities may be downgraded. These risks are typically increased for below investment grade debt securities which may also be subject to higher volatility and lower liquidity than investment grade debt securities. The credit worthiness of unrated debt securities is not measured by reference to an independent credit rating agency.

Government debt securities, including those issued by local governments and government agencies, are subject to market risk, interest rate risk and credit risk. Governments may default on their sovereign debt and holders of sovereign debt (including the Sub-Fund) may be requested to participate in the rescheduling of such debt and to extend further loans to governmental entities. There is no bankruptcy proceeding by which sovereign debt on which a government has defaulted may be collected in whole or in part. Global economies are highly dependent on one another and the consequences of the default of any sovereign state may be severe and far reaching and could result in substantial losses to the Sub-Fund.

Emerging markets may be subject to increased political, regulatory and economic instability, less developed custody and settlement practices, poor transparency and greater financial risks. Emerging market and below investment grade debt securities may also be subject to higher volatility and lower liquidity than non-emerging market and investment grade debt securities respectively.

Through its investments in Underlying Funds, the Sub-Fund may be exposed to China A-Shares through the China-Hong Kong Stock Connect Programmes and China onshore debt securities through the China-Hong Kong Bond Connect and/or the China Interbank Bond Market, which are subject to regulatory change, quota limitations and also operational constraints (as set out in the Prospectus) which may result in increased counterparty risk. Investors should also refer more generally to the risk disclosures in the Prospectus under the heading "Investment in the People's Republic of China (PRC)" in the "Risk Information" section of the Prospectus for further details on the risks associated with exposure to China.

Sustainability risk may materially negatively impact the financial condition or operating performance of an issuer and therefore the value of that investment. In addition, it may increase the Sub-Fund's volatility and/or magnify pre-existing risks to the Sub-Fund. Further information about risks can be found in the "Risk Information" section of the Prospectus.
