Important notice to our Shareholders

The conflict between Russia and Ukraine is not just affecting political relations but is also having an impact on the economy. Both the sanctions imposed on Russia and other geopolitical developments led to more expensive and scarcer energy, higher inflation and interest rates, and supply chain problems during the reporting period. These effects are also reflected in capital markets, where prices are influenced by market movements. The global economy and capital markets continue to face high levels of uncertainty.

The Economic Sanctions issued against the Russian Federation, the separatist regions of Donetsk People's Republic and Luhansk People's Republic, and Belarus are constantly evolving. AllianzGI is complying with all relevant current sanctions and intends to comply with all relevant future sanctions. All trades that AllianzGI sends to its counterparties comply with AllianzGI's obligations under the relevant sanctions. AllianzGI has a globally coordinated economic sanctions team from the Legal, Compliance and Risk functions that monitors economic sanctions and coordinates their implementation. This team is actively monitoring the current situation and has been working with impacted departments, including portfolio management, trading and operations, to take relevant action and ensure timely implementation.

As of 31 March 2025, the Fund holds [direct] investments in Russia, or Belarus. These assets have been either fair valued with de minimis (i.e. near null), given the uncertainty of their value due to trading restrictions applicable under the relevant sanction regimes for these specific financial instruments or using 3rd party vendor data for financial instruments deemed as still tradeable even if under certain constraints. The statements included herein are as of the date provided and are subject to change.

AllianzGI has policies, procedures, and systems in place to screen new and existing investors against applicable sanctions lists. In relation to Article 5f of Regulation (EU) No 833/2014 and Article 1y of Regulation (EC) No 765/2006, AllianzGI has decided to stop selling any fund units/shares or securities to Russian and Belarussian nationals after 12 April 2022. In this regard, AllianzGI has instructed its distribution partners, fund platforms and service providers such as transfer agents to stop distributing fund units/shares to Russian and Belarussian nationals. Where Russian or Belarussian nationals hold units/shares in funds before 12 April 2022, AllianzGI has instructed their service providers to block the investor's account for subscriptions and other transactions which would constitute a sale of fund units/shares.

Economic situation and capital market in the reporting period/outlook

Emerging concerns for growth and inflation

As at the end of March 2025, in the half-year under review the global economy continued to grow. However, there have recently been concerns that the US could lose its significance as a growth driver in the future. One reason for this was the realisation that the United States' highly deficit-ridden budget needed to be consolidated. On the other hand, fears arose that the import tariffs planned by the new Donald Trump administration would cause significant disruption and a resurgence of US inflation.

Against this background, concerns grew that the previously generally expected easing of monetary policy by central banks in developed countries might be less pronounced or even non-existent.

The economic situation in emerging markets remained characterised by independent trends, including the increasing importance of domestic demand. There was also the prospect of new economic stimuli from the Chinese government. Nevertheless, the uncertainty surrounding the further development of the US economy has considerably weighed on capital market sentiment in emerging markets as well.

Equities: Shift in favourites at regional level

In view of increased scepticism about the US market and valuation advantages in other regions, the global equity market saw a clear shift in favourites.

The US equity market underwent a correction, particularly for major technology stocks, which had previously dominated. This also reflected a more restrained assessment of the short-term earnings potential in the field of artificial intelligence. Against this backdrop, the previously high valuation premiums were increasingly called into question.

On the one hand, the European stock exchanges, which had previously lagged behind the US market, benefited from the shift in sentiment. In particular, stocks from Germany were in high demand, with many investors hoping for a significant boost in earnings from planned additional government expenditure in armaments and infrastructure.

On the other hand, equities from Japan and China performed well, reflecting not only relatively attractive valuations but also the increasingly independent growth momentum in the Asian region. For Japan, it also appeared that the long-standing deflation and the consequent period of negative interest rates had finally been overcome.

With nervousness on the stock markets on the rise and a decline in risk appetite overall, volatility – the average fluctuation range of equity prices – rose on balance.

Bonds: Yields and spreads trend upwards

The growing scepticism on the financial markets, especially with regard to the United States, was largely reflected in rising yields and spreads on global bond markets. A further contributing factor to this was that expectations for further easing of monetary policy in developed economies grew weaker.

The rise in yields was accompanied by corresponding declines in the prices of bonds in circulation on the market. Depending on the level of current interest rates, a portion of the total revenue was eroded as a result. This was particularly noticeable in high-quality government and corporate bonds. In contrast, high-interest securities from Europe and Asia continued to generally generate higher net income. In the United States, on the other hand, losses on high yield bonds were greater for the most part. In the case of emerging market bonds in key currencies, the emerging uncertainty on global markets resulted in international investors withdrawing from the segment, although the fundamental situation of issuers still appeared robust.

Outlook

Equities

Our in-house Macro Breadth Growth Index, which summarises global macroeconomic data, has fallen for the first time in six months. Indicators weakened in the US, the UK, China, as well as some other emerging markets. By contrast, securities in Japan and the Eurozone recovered. In the United States, the world's largest economy, uncertainty about tariffs, immigration, fiscal policy and regulation is weighing on sentiment in the economy and among investors. We therefore expect growth to slow more than is generally expected on the market. The outlook for Europe, however, is beginning to brighten. Higher spending on defence and, in Germany, on infrastructure is likely to kick-start stagnating growth. For China, we expect the government to continue to support the economy in the face of the fragile real estate market and the threat of tariffs on exports to the US. We are cautiously optimistic in terms of equities as a whole. However, we are anticipating major fluctuations and regional diverging developments on the stock exchanges of individual countries and regions in the coming months, with this trend potentially being further exacerbated by geopolitical tensions. Overall, we believe that this scenario provides a favourable environment for active management based on fundamental analysis.

Bonds

In the US, tariffs imposed by the Trump administration could fuel inflation by raising the prices of imported goods. With this in mind, we expect the US Federal Reserve to end its interest rate cuts prematurely and that interest rates will settle at around 4%. We thus expect the US yield curve to steepen. In Europe, higher spending programmes for defence and infrastructure are expected to stimulate growth, with the effects likely not being felt until 2026. We expect the European Central Bank to reduce its deposit rate to a neutral level of around 2% in the coming quarters. This should also lead to a steepening of the yield curve in the Eurozone. We believe that a nuanced approach is advisable for corporate bonds. In view of expected interest rate fluctuations and overall low spreads, a selective approach with individual analysis of bonds and issuers seems appropriate. Emerging markets are proving quite resilient overall, so selected investments in emerging market bonds also appear to be a useful source of additional yields in certain cases.
